

TWO-PLY FISTIC CHAMPION

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Johnny Buff, thirty-three and the daddy of a family of three children, is a two-ply fistic champion today.

Buff entered the ring with Pete Herman in the opening show of the season at Madison Square Garden and came out of it with the bantamweight championship, thanks to a judges' decision at the end of fifteen rounds. Buff had previously captured the American flyweight title and holds the Rickard belt.

The decision in Buff's favor was received with various emotions by the crowd and was not particularly pop-part of the fight and went in lashing Herman with his skinny left.

Herman fought as stolidy and as indifferently as the night he lost his title at the Garden to Joe Lynch. Afterward, in Brooklyn, he came back and recaptured the title easily. Per-haps he has found a new way of mak-

Next to pitching, there is no position more vital in a world's series than catching. Weakness behind the bat can go a long way in throwing an otherwise strong team off its stride. Wrold series history records few instances where a team weak in catching won baseball's

The Detroit Tigers, which lost three straight series were handicapped by inefficient catching. The game in which Charley Schmidt failed to hold a third strike by Bill Donovan for what should have been the twenty-seventh put-out was a shining example of this inefficiency.

The present world's series possibilities are all strong in first-string catchers, though several of them are woofully weak in their second-string men. In Walter Schmidt, brother of Charley, the former Tiger, the Pirates have a receiver who comes pretty close to being the top-notcher of the National League. But Pittsburgh's second-stringers have been a sorry lot.

What Ruth Did at Bat

Buff fought a masterly battle, cool and courageous, but fighting all the time. He never gave an inch. His frail-looking little body stood up under sustained as usual.

Herman seemed very loggy, and tired early. His punches lacked steam, his action lacked fire. He is certainly an in-and-outer as fighters are rated. However, this takes not line from the state of the state Ruth first up—Strike, swung: Ruth doubled to right, taking third on Meusel's sacrifice and scoring on
